

Allison Courtney Clark

July 15, 1981 - July 25, 2022

Allison Courtney Clark passed away peacefully on July 25, 2022. Allison was born on July 15, 1981, in Washington DC. She was one of three children of the predeceased Donna Courtney and survived by Roger Courtney. She grew up in Burke VA with her twin brother, Adam Courtney and older brother, Andrew Courtney. Allison attended Robinson Secondary School. She became a mother to Eve Alyn Courtney at 20 years old and raised her in Burke, VA. On August 29, 2014, she married Kevin Clark and moved to Manassas, VA where they have lived since along with Eve and their two children (twins), Abraham and Adelaide, and her father Roger.

Allison was a devoted mother, daughter, sister, and friend to so many.

Allison was a social butterfly growing up. She got along with everyone. In high school, she stayed busy participating in many different extracurricular activities including theater, choir, and drill team. If music was involved, she was all in. She formed friendships during those early years that are still strong to this day.

Everyone close to Allison probably has a concert story or experience with her. She loved live music and always had multiple concerts in her calendar. With Kevin, she was even recently able to travel to Red Rocks in Colorado for the Avett Brothers, her favorite band.

Allison worked as a billing specialist and loved her job immensely. She felt incredibly supported by Fairfax Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery and was so dedicated that she continued to work up until the day of her final hospitalization.

Allison could see the humor in all situations; sometimes with real mirth and sometimes with sarcasm, but always with a sense of ease about her. When you did something that she thought was ridiculous she would give that look, the one that seemed to let you know she was laughing at your choices in the kindest way. Her humor helped her see the fun or the laughter in even the hardest times.

Allison was well known as a strong member of the 12-Step recovery community. Over the last few years her strength in that community helped her tremendously in carrying through her battles with cancer with grace, faith, and dignity.

Allison carried on a long family tradition of needlepointing. Grandma Rose and her mom were good, but Allison took it to the next level by drawing the designs herself. Wherever Allison traveled, even to the hospital for treatment, her needlepoint was with her. She was always creating special pieces for her family and friends.

She carried on the family tradition of strong women. Allison became a mother at an early age and with the support of her parents and community raised a beautiful strong woman, Eve. Allison made another turning point in her life when she met Kevin. She hadn't quite figured things out until then, but with Kevin it just clicked; they soon married and had twins of their own. Allison loved Kevin to no end, and Kevin was with her by her side at her passing. Allison is survived by her father, Roger Courtney; her husband, Kevin Clark; her children, Eve (20), Adelaide (7), Abraham (7); her brother Andrew (Dominique), and Adam, her twin brother, and her beautiful nieces and nephew, Camilla (10), Rocco (8), and Cleo(2).

We love you, Allison. Rest easy and be at peace.

On July 15, 2022 at 3:14 am, I awoke to tremendous left leg pain with a jolt. For some reason that only a Higher Power could answer, I thought of Alison. I only knew Alison from her hospitalizations but she left a memorable, positive impression. I did not know that like my husband, she was part of the fellowship, but that totally makes sense to me now. I also did not know her birthdate offhand, but I thought of her on that day...and think of her often as an example of courage, hope, positivity, and determination. In many ways, she was a bright light - an inspiration - and I hope her children get to hear of her beautiful impact throughout their lives. My heart goes out to all who lost an amazing human being in their midst. I suspect she is still sending messages of humor from beyond...

“ I met Alison through working at FOMS. She helped me with many billing questions. Whenever I worked in the Fairfax office I made sure to go see her just to get and give a hug. When Covid hit, I left to work from home and we did not keep in touch as much as I would have liked to. In the short year and a half of working together I knew she was really special with a huge heart. We met up once for brunch at the Yorkshire Restaurant that she recommended and had a great time with lots of laughs. Prayers of healing for the family. She is reunited with her Mother now and I'm sure she is loving it.
