When Gerry brought Bev to our home for the first time so we could meet her in the late 60's we had roast beef for dinner served rare. We thought Bev was going to be sick at the table when she saw the red meat. Dan promptly put it back in the oven and saved the day. No more rare meat when Bev visited.

Oh Aunt MJ, you are so right. It had to be burnt for her to eat it. Never thought of how that worked at dinner parties.
