“ On this day my life changed knowing you were not with us anymore. I actually remember it like it was today. The painful spike in my heart, the tears i tried not to shed because i knew you wouldn't want me to cry. The last pound you gave me before i walked out the room. The promises of the doctors saying it will all be okay. During these times i didn't know how to accept the fact you left and the hardest part was knowing that there was going to be an emptiness in me. I never knew that 3 years later i would still be here looking for that last moment we shared in my head replaying it as if it was a movie. I often hear you in my head when times are rough, the lessons you taught me. The right from wrong or the countless hours of working. Those are what i cherish most now, just the time i was able to spend with you. Now i know its all memories but you reside inside me. Through the thick and thin you are inside me. For that i am thankful to have you as my grandfather. You live on in me when i look in the mirror especially when fight my battles. I take the courage and strength you had and i use implement it into me. I will fulfill and continue on making you proud. I love you. I know your are looking down on me. I hope that you get a chance to read this! I love you TATA. Steven Anthony-Duenas Taylor

“ Juanita its been awhile since I've last seen you and the family... I last saw uncle Juan when I was doing my internship at mt Vernon cardiology... I was so pleasd to have done an ekg with dad, he saw me smiled and ask what was I doing there, it was funny... I told him to take care if him,he laughed... I miss when I would come over and see you all. Laughs at uncle eds house too... our pool days, and our nite outs.... you are definitely a wonderful person and such a loving fun finely to be around with..... dad is in a better place like they would all say...and its true.... love and miss you all...stay safe bow dad can see everything.:)

“ There are so many happy memories that I cant think of only one. Juan's presence and memory is everywhere I have been this week, at my home, Andrew and Riley's school, the stores and restaurants we would go to. There is not one room in my house that is not filled with happy memories of Ta Ta. These memories myself and Andrew and Riley hold dear and will hold on to forever. Last summer I had the priveledge of spending more time with the man who has become a second father to me during a week long beach vacation. I will always remember the talks he and I had and the advice and support he has always given to me. Andrew and Riley will remember the love and the good times and will miss their Ta Ta so much. Juanita, Stevie, Agnes and Edwin- thank you for sharing Juan with us and accepting me and my kids into the family. Love Always, Donna

“ Please accept our deepest sympathy on the untimely passing of your father. Your father was such a lovely person and so active and vibrant, which makes it even harder to comprehend his death. Lance and I had seen him recently and although it was only a quick wave and a hello, we are so glad to have had that time with him. We would have liked the opportunity to let him know how highly regarded he was and will always be sorry that we didn't express that as much as we should have. Your family is in our thoughts and prayers.
