“ We will miss visiting with you and you beating us at NTN even though you entered late in the game. Hope heaven has a fully charged box. Rest well, Haldir, and may the Lord's face shine upon you and give you peace.

“ Steve and my dad met each other on Father's day. They immediately hit it off because of their love of history. I'm going to miss Steve because of his kindness and intelligent demeanor. Steve's probably up there now kicking butt in trivia's past-times. RIP good friend.

“ A guy walks into a bar. He doesn't know anyone, but seconds after blurting out the answer to a trivia question a large friendly fellow compliments him...buys him a beer...and invites him to join his "entourage". I've been blessed to call Steve friend since that first time we met nearly two years ago. I know that all in his "Kilroy's entourage" will miss his intelligence, his humour, and his kind, caring, generous spirit. A life too short...but a life well lived indeed.

“ Steve shared many a joke and a good time with my wife and I at Kilroy's. I will sorely miss him. Memory Eternal!

“ I met Steve when we both attended the Miami University European Center in Luxembourg. He was a friend through thick and thin, always ready to make a joke and to lend a helping hand or listening ear. I am grateful to have known him and to have counted him as a friend.
