“ Today, September 10, I did not open my email until after lunch. Regretfully, it was too late to don the black suit and drive to the National Memorial Park to attend Suzy van Massenhove’s funeral. I would have liked to attend the ceremony as a last tribute to a nice person who helped me a number of times; who visited my late wife, Michelle, in INOVA Fairfax hospital when she had already slipped into a coma; and who came to the funeral ceremony for Michelle at Saint Andrews even though she did not feel very well. All of a sudden the years have slipped by and she is no longer there. There are always regrets but the memories are heartfelt & it is so rare to be able to converse with a person in three different languages.
